Safe House

Safe House is "a decent February movie that smartly extends (Denzel) Washington's God-on-the-run character."

The Vow

"Ready-made for Valentine's Day," The Vow (starring Channing Tatum and Rachel McAdams) may be "earnest hokum," but it's "beautifully acted."

Stripping fairies. Leather-clad spiders. Sword-wielding seductresses.

The geniuses behind Super Mario Burlesque are back with more nerd-centered burlesque.

This time they take aim at Lord of the Rings with Fellowship of the Boobs: An LoTR, WoW, D&D RPG Burlesque, now running Saturday nights at the Gorilla Tango Theatre.

Taking aim at the holy geek Trinity of Lord of the Rings, World of Warcraft, and Dungeons & Dragons, the show mixes light satire with fantasy and — of course — plenty of bare female chests.

The plot follows four buxom warriors (elf, dwarf, Amazon warrior, and "mysterious fourth companion") as they journey across the sea, under mountains, and out of their clothes.

Don't miss the six-armed leather-clad spider trapping the elf in a cocoon, resulting in a sexy silhouette striptease from a white sheet that has the crowd yelping in delight.

We promise it'll be almost as good as Game of Thrones.

Almost.
