Once again, Gorilla Tango Burlesque has come up with another geek/pop culture themed burlesque comedy show with Temple of the Boobs: An Indiana Jones Burlesque. I don't even know if I can count all of the burlesque shows they have had running; there's Boobs and Goombas: A Super Mario Burlesque, A Nude Hope: A Star Wars Burlesque, Boobs of Khan: A Star Trek Burlesque, Fellowship of the Boobs: A LOTR, D&D, WoW, RPG Burlesque Adventure, and Gleeks & Freaks: A Glee Burlesque Musical. It's quite a lineup!

This one is based on the Indiana Jones series of movies which began in 1984 and maybe Dr. Jones pop culture has not stuck in our brains quite as well as Star Wars, but it's a fun show.

Written by Amy Whittenberger and directed by Stella Cheeks it's a Spielberg quality adventure complete with airplane and car rides, a mine car chase scene and a very creative Indy style mapping system. This is an amazing accomplishment on the basic stage of Gorilla Tango!

Indiana Jones is played with swagger and bright red sparkle lipstick by Sadie Hotkins and constantly accompanied by Shortround (Bella Canto). Bella steals many scenes with laughs in her portrayal of young Asian boy Shortround, who always protests that he's really a grown woman. We eventually find out in the end...

They are stuck in a far away land where a sacred statue has been stolen by Pincha Nippol played with great enthusiasm by Ellie Gator and her assistant, Mola Ram (Juicy Lucy). Mola has a very interesting technique for issuing orders, instead of clapping, stomping or saluting, she slaps her breasts together with a very funny and always surprising double slap.

Of course, there is plenty of dancing and undressing in this Indy Jones burlesque world, so go check it out and have a great time.
